AS IN THE DAYS OF NOAH – PART I

“And as it was in the days of Noah, so it will be also in the days of the Son of Man: They ate, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all. Likewise as it was also in the days of Lot: They ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they built; but on the day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even so will it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed.” (Matthew 17:26-30)

In Matthew 17, Jesus gave clear warning as to what it would be like in the period that leads up to His return; - “as in the days of Noah.” What exactly did he mean? Scholars debate the issue. But there seem to be several points that Christ may have been trying to make. So what was it like in the days of Noah and Lot? Here are some of its characteristics.

- 1. It was a time of unbridled violence. Genesis 6:11 tells us: “And the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence.”*
- 2. It was a time of incredible sexual depravity. Genesis 19 details how the men of Sodom surrounded the house that Lot was staying in demanding to be allowed to have their sexual way with his visitors.*
- 3. Homosexuality would become normalized. The Babylonian Talmud – (Jewish commentaries that were compiled during the early centuries after Christ) – reveal a very interesting fact. As Dr Jeffrey Satinover has put it: “There was only one time in history, according to these writings, where men were given in marriage to men, and women given in marriage to women...The one time in history when homosexual “marriage” was practiced was ... during the days of Noah....that’s what the “Babylonian Talmud” attributes as the final straw that led to the Flood.”^{1 2}*
- 4. It was a time of scoffing at God’s word. Noah preached the coming judgment for 120 years without a single convert outside his family. It was a time of unbelief. 2Peter 3:3 confirms that “there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts.” (KJV)*
- 5. But here’s the craziest one. Perhaps the most significant characteristic that describes the ‘Days of Noah’ – and the one that can explain the existence of all the others – is that it will be a time of the return of the Nephilim. Referred to as giants in some translations, these were the product of sexual unions between fallen angels and the “daughters of men.” These rebellious angels had corrupted the DNA of mankind, creating a race of their own making. Genesis 6:4 explains. “There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.” (KJV)*

It’s off of this last one that we’ll spend a little time; looking at what today’s developments and how they might play in to the age that is unfolding.

TRANSHUMANISM: A SEARCH FOR PERFECTION

“For God knows that in the day you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil.” (Genesis 3:5)

The ultimate in human ambition: To be like God. Check out this conference being held at the University of Utah. It's called The 2010 Transhumanism and Spirituality Conference. 'OK, What's that all about', you ask. Here's a definition. "Transhumanism is an international intellectual and cultural movement supporting the use of science and technology to improve human mental and physical characteristics and capacities." Another tells us that it "refers to an evolutionary transition from the human to the posthuman."³ That means that they're looking at something that is beyond human. In their terms, an improvement! Playing at God, they are. As the article in the Daily Utah Chronicle explained, transhumanists were "producing technology to eliminate aging and enhance human intellectual, physical and psychological capacities." [Ah! Isn't that beautiful? It makes me all warm and fuzzy and my heart begins to pitter patter.] To them, there is "no reason to settle" for the normal human limitations. As the article was kind enough to admit, the Transhumanist movement "does have some of the same functions people seek in religion". And its adherents, for the most part, "do not believe in a higher being."⁴

What this is all about – on the technological level – is creating artificial intelligence (AI) by combining digital, computer technology and neuroscience. In the not-to-distant future they hope to be able to replicate the circuitry of the brain, housing that in some sort of robot equipped with sensory organs. That begs a very important question: What is it that is being created. Ryan A Piccirillo asks some searing questions about the meaning and value of life in the light of the creative horizon. "A machine which has a brain identical to the human brain; a machine which has sensory organs and a nervous system; a machine which has a metabolic mechanism for energy autonomy; a machine that, by virtue of the fact it was designed after its human creators, can replicate itself asexually. Must we ascribe life to this machine? More importantly, if we must, what does that say about human life? If the above outline one day becomes a reality – if in the future we build a robot that is humanity's cognitive twin – how will the value of its life be determined?"⁵

Terry James of Rapture Ready asks a most natural follow up question. "Are we the last generation of humans as God made them?" He points out that we've gone way beyond the spiritual technology of Ouija boards – all the way to nanotechnology, genetic manipulation, AI and Transhumanist philosophy. James argues that those rebellious angels were all about producing soulless beings – neither human nor angelic – that had no chance at redemption. These were the Nephilim, the "spiritual heirs to their fallen b'nai ha Elohim progenitors."⁶ [To explain, the term b'nai ha Elohim is translated "sons of God" and refers to angelic beings; or specifically in this case, the rebellious segment of the heavenly host.] Now just hang on to that definition. It will come into play later, as we reveal what is going on. So it seems, 'Science', may be cooperating in a similar attempt to create "soulless" beings. Here's some of what's going on.

The technological advancements of recent years are nothing less than astounding – mind boggling – species-transforming. Transhumanism can be described as a cultural movement that envisions a directed-evolution – (yes, in the physical sense as well as the spiritual) – of the human organism. Tom Horn tells us how it envisions the "use of biotechnology, genetic engineering, nanotechnology, cybernetics, and artificial intelligence as tools that will radically redesign our minds, our memories, our physiology, our offspring, and even perhaps— as Joel Garreau, in his bestselling book Radical Evolution, claims—our very souls."⁷ Sound crazy and overblown? Wait till you see what exactly they're working on. The term that is being kicked around these days is posthuman – and it has very real meaning.

Take first the field of Synthetic Biology. Scientists are not working at creating entirely new genomes. Midway through 2010, biologist Craig Ventner synthesized a DNA code and injected it into a single bacteria creating what many are calling, "artificial life". To what purpose, you may ask. Some uses may be to create organisms capable of sucking up oil spills or fabricating drugs.⁸ This, and other similar experiments, are all about controlling the very building blocks of life. Jerome Glenn, writing for the Millennium Project, explains. Just as software is developed for our computers, "genetic code will be written to create life forms to augment civilization."⁹ We've already seen how scientific experimentation has resulted in the patenting of new lines of seeds. Now this is spreading to animal, plant and synthetic life forms. In the words of Charles Colson and his co-authors, “The patenting of genes and other human tissue has already begun to turn human nature into property.”¹⁰ The implication of such developments are naturally turning traditional morality on its head.

The consequences of such squishy thinking is evident in the now almost-routine stories that we get of human-animal embryos being created in laboratories. Human DNA was being inserted into pig embryos as far back as 2000.¹¹ The production of the hybrids was approved in the UK back in 2008; - all in the name of finding cures for Parkinson’s disease and the like.¹² Plans are on the table now to combine human embryonic cells with rabbits and cows.¹³ So far much of the research has centered on the creation of stem cells that can be turned into other more specialized to advance the curing of diseases and genetic conditions. But some thinkers naturally see the day when embryos will be created for ‘spare parts’ for other human beings.¹⁴ And that’s just the issue. When does life begin? We cannot develop the thought fully here, but I believe that the Biblical argument is clear. From the human perspective: Life begins at conception. From God’s point of view it seems to originate even before that. Our essence and worth come from the fact that we are made in the image of God – by the very will of God. Jeremiah 1:5 tells us: “Before I formed you in the womb I knew you.” Psalm 139:15-16 reveals that we are formed in the secret place – in the mind of God. “My frame was not hidden from you when I was made in the secret place. When I was woven together in the depths of the earth, your eyes saw my unformed body. All the days ordained for me were written in your book before one of them came to be.” Therefore the creation of even 8 cell human organisms presupposes the existence of a soul. But what happens when the DNA is tainted through combination with animal life forms such a pig? Does that presage the fabrication of ‘soulless’ life form? And what of resurrections? It was reported in 2009 that an extinct mountain goat, the Pyrean ibex, was brought back to life from dead tissues. There is talk now of reviving Tasmanian tigers and woolly mammoths from recovered tissue samples. And there is a very real argument going on to “Resurrect” the Neanderthals. Think of the spiritual confusion that may result. Of course if we are all just the product of evolution...^{15 16}

The attack on humanity continues. The science of genetics is now beginning to be applied to the task of “genetically modifying human genes in very early embryos, sperm and eggs.” This is “human-enhancement technology” and is perhaps the most dangerous as these genetic changes will be passed down to succeeding generations. They seek to make better human beings by reassembling “the very nature of humanity.”¹⁷ Some researchers seek to create human beings with “sonar, magnetic orientation, or sensors for electricity and vibration.”

But altering human DNA is not the only means of moving mankind toward its rendezvous with its revolutionary destiny. Discussions by such pretentiously august groups as the World Academy of Arts and Sciences, take on subjects “creating abilities” not natural to the organism and symbiosis between “people and intelligent machines”.¹⁸ We’re talking here about something called nanotechnology and its adoption will truly create a revolution in the way that mankind looks at what it means to be human. The ability to combine human and machine intelligence would transcend the boundaries of humanity. Already, pieces are being put in place to advance the cause. Some examples. Military organizations around the globe are already using “Electro Magnetic Fields to control the psychological state of the population in a city or geographic area.” Even TIME Magazine recently reported that the Pentagon is developing ‘mind control helmets’ that would allow “direct mental control of military systems by thought alone.” In other words they are working toward communication using only thoughts. Commentator Paul Maguire goes on to explain some of the other uses the military is looking at. You see, eventually HQ will be able to control the soldier’s mind as he fights on the battlefield. These helmets would use neurotechnology to create de-facto cyborg warriors. “The Pentagon is developing these special military helmets that control a soldier’s psychiatric status, which includes cognitive enhancement, alertness, reducing stress, blocking pain and allows soldiers to stay awake for days at a time.” It is a short step to a chip that will allow such control all the time.^{19 20} Mind-control, human-machine combos, human-animal combos, ‘humans’ enhanced with the abilities of animals, gene manipulation that will increase capabilities and manipulate future generations. Who are we? What does it mean to be human? And what does it say about the days in which we are living? These are questions that we will be begin to tackle ...next time.

ECONOMICS & REVOLUTION – PART XXIV – [AN ADDENDUM]

Financial developments are increasing social & economic pressures tending toward the breakdown of social conditions. The 'Fix'? Why a New World Order, of course! Thus the revolution is served.

COMING CLEAN

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke is beginning to speak the truth. The US economy is in a whole lot of trouble right now. Bernanke admitted in a recent speech that “projections by the CBO and others show future budget deficits and debts rising indefinitely, and at increasing rates.” That’s pretty strong language from a central banker. It’s like he’s preparing us for something. “The budgetary position of the federal government has deteriorated substantially during the past two fiscal years.” He warns that ObamaCare will be “the biggest single source of fiscal imbalances over the long term.” [ObamaCare, a strain on the budget? What a surprise that must be!] Further, Social Security will be strained to the breaking point with not enough workers to pay for the retirees and there will be budgetary pressures on state and local governments.²¹ [Has Ben been reading old issues of this newsletter or watching Glenn Beck reruns?] All that pressure is leading the Federal Reserve to signal that they are considering allowing inflation to rise in order to boost the economy: The theory is that this would discourage saving and encourage spending by consumers and businesses.²² In addition, one of the biggest hurdles the US government is now facing is that it needs to refinance $4 trillion over the next 2 years. Other nations are in similar straits. The IMF says that will require emergency supports to not only the United States but also Spain and Germany.²³ Countries are already scrambling, taking steps toward devaluing their currencies in order to improve their balance of trade positions.

So right now we’re seeing gold, silver and other precious metals rising in value as a global currency crisis develops. That is spurring interest in the ultimate of transformational fixes; a New World Currency. In fact, Jerome Corsi reports, “The Institute of International Finance, a group that represents 420 of the world's largest banks and finance houses, has issued yet another call for a one-world global currency.” [Global currency? Global economy? One World Government? My head is spinning!]

And in Europe, angry citizens are hitting the streets protesting the austerity measures that are being put in place by governments that are unable to take care of their obligations. The gravy train is over. The days of overspending – and the many unaffordable benefits that it brings - may soon be coming to an end. While Europeans are taking action, Americans may soon feel similar pressures. The U6 unemployment numbers – (the one’s using the same methodology as the government used during the 1980’s and have now abandoned) – has the unemployment numbers at 22%. That is Depression level – with a ‘Capital D’. Trends Research analyst Gerald Celente draws a dire scenario for the near future. It is the 1930’s all over again. Celente believes we will soon be heading into “The Greatest Depression”. And just like the 1930’s, that will bring Revolution in the streets. That former dark era saw the birth of a fascist movement and he believes that it will be the same today. Even Western governments are preparing extraordinary measures for what they believe is the coming civil unrest. In addition, there is a new partnership developing between government and business. This is Statism; economic control by the government. Celente has in the past said that the US would devolve into a third world in the near future. To him, the end game is coming. Depression – Revolution – War!²⁴ That recipe would fit exactly with what the PTB have revealed to be their game plan for creating the New World Order headed by a New Age Messiah. Got Jesus ?
